

Alí R. Bustamante, Ph.D. is the chief economist at the Louisiana Workforce Commission (the Department of Labor). He has more than 10 years' experience collaborating with government agencies and community stakeholders to solve complex economic problems with a focus on people, markets and processes. Dr. Bustamante formerly served as faculty at Florida International University and Loyola University New Orleans.